

Resident Spotlight

This month, the spotlight goes to Cathy Miller in Apartment 116. You can often see Cathy attending book club and brightening our halls with her infectious smile! Cathy was born and raised in the Omaha area later attending Creighton University! As an avid reader, you will often find Cathy soaking up the latest novel! If you ever need a new author or book to enjoy, just ask Cathy, for she's your gal! Cathy we are so happy you make Bailey Pointe your home, and we look forward to hearing all the great novels you conquer at book club! We also want to wish you the happiest of birthdays this month!

Corn in the Fall: It's A-maze-ing

It's autumn. The craze of the corn maze is a real thing. It rivals pumpkin patches in popularity, but how? When did traipsing through a corn maze become a fall staple activity? Mazes are labyrinths, and they've been prevalent for hundreds of years in Roman, Egyptian, and Greek cultures, among others. They've always had appeal in both real life and in mythology.

But that isn't exactly why corn mazes became so intriguing in America. In the 1990s, Pennsylvania became home to a large-scale corn maze. It was an attraction like no other that garnered massive amounts of attention, not just agriculturally. As such, it was no time at all before other corn mazes started popping up throughout the U.S. Visiting one quickly became a family-friendly activity.

Corn mazes are more than just a fall delight, though. They're used as an educational tool in the study of geography, primarily in elementary and secondary school. Humans navigate their way through the tall stalks of corn in the flesh, searching for the best route to get them where they need to go. This is not at all dissimilar from navigating a maze drawn on paper or determining how to make one's way through a city center in a place they've never visited. All of the above requires a map of some kind (mental or physical or both). When it comes to studying geography, a corn maze, when treated as a map, can be a great resource that helps students explore scales, topography, land use, crop growth, and more. It's not simply used for amusement.

There's so much more to a maze than meets the eye.

Capturing Memories

Looking back, we had great fun with our Sagora Games, enjoyed great socials, and heard some acoustics by Terrence Keefe.

Upcoming Events

Looking back on September, there were so many exciting things to reflect on, such as our farmers market and Sagora Senior Games! For October, there is so much to look forward to! Our theme this month is the Sagora State Fair, with our Bailey Pointe Family and Friends Fair occurring on Friday, October 4th. This fun community event will give that fair feel without all the hustle and bustle!

This month is going to be filled with themed activities, such as our Halloween festivities at the end of the month. Here are a few of our featured programs happening this month: pumpkin decorating, spooky trivia, pumpkin spice socials, and a 2-hour special entertainment event with Elvis! Don't forget to plan your costumes for our annual Halloween Party on Halloween itself at 2 pm, followed by a Trunk-or-Treat event that night at 6:30 pm. So come on, all you ghouls and ghosts, let's get out, get active, and make this month one spooktastic state fair!

Let's Celebrate!
